

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

FOREWORD

HARVARD'S MILITARY RECORD IN THE WORLD WAR contains the service records of eleven thousand three hundred and nineteen men, including three hundred and seventy-one whose names are on the Roll of Honor. But it is not and does not pretend to be a complete record. It is rather a compilation of the reports sent in at the request of the Harvard War Records Office by the men themselves or by their families. To all these, who so generously coöperated to make this volume as true a mirror as possible of Harvard's part in the World War, the editor is very grateful. Without their aid nothing could have been accomplished. In their behalf it may be well here to state that the records as published are not as written by the men themselves but as prepared by the staff of the office in accordance with certain standards suggested by experts and approved by the Advisory Committee of the Directors of the Harvard Alumni Association.

The editor is deeply indebted to Major Robert Charles Frederick Goetz, U.S.A., Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Harvard, and to his assistant, Captain Robert W. Daniels, for their unflinching patience and courtesy and for their valued aid in standardizing the army records. Equally valuable assistance on the naval records was given by Captain James P. Parker, U.S.N.R.F., Harvard '96, Lieutenant Commander Henry Eckford Rhoades, U.S.N., Retired, and Lieutenant Commander Walter Safford Burke, U.S.N., Retired, Inspector of Grounds and Buildings of Harvard University.

Especial mention should be made of the invaluable service rendered by André Morize, Captain in the French Army, August 4, 1914 to May 15, 1919, at present Assistant Professor of French Literature at Harvard. Captain Morize read all of the army records before they were sent to the men for correction and verification. A similar service in reading all the naval records was rendered by Lieutenant Commander Rhoades. The constant sympathy and interest shown by the members of the Advisory Committee of the Directors of the Harvard Alumni Association, Odin Roberts '86, Clifford H. Moore '89, and Jeremiah Smith, Jr. '92, were an unflinching inspiration.

To the loyal and efficient staff of the office are the editor's gratitude and thanks most due. He would especially mention with warmest appreciation Miss Fanny Chandler, Miss Madelon Chandler, Miss Dubois, Miss Harlow, Miss Magruder, Miss Richardson, Miss Whittlesey, and Miss Wilson. For nearly four years the office worked faithfully and enthusiastically to make these records worthy of the men and of the University.

FOREWORD

The editor would gratefully acknowledge the friendly coöperation of M. A. DeWolfe Howe, biographer of the Harvard Dead in the War against Germany, and of William C. Lane, president of the Harvard Memorial Society; also the assistance of Alfred C. Potter, assistant librarian of the Widener Library, whose advice so often asked was so cheerfully given. The problem of the make-up of the book was in a large measure solved by recourse to the experience of Mr. Adam K. Wilson, University Printer.

The editor's association with all those mentioned above is a memory it is a pleasure to record.

It is fitting that the records of service in the war should be preceded by a statement of what Harvard men did to prepare for the war. There is no one who was more interested in these preparations or is better qualified to write on this subject than Langdon P. Marvin '98, the author of the following article.

HARVARD'S PART IN PREPARING FOR THE WORLD WAR

LANGDON P. MARVIN, A.B., A.M., LL.B.

THE service rendered by Harvard men in the armies and navies of this country and of the nations associated with it in the World War is described in the records of the individuals contained in this volume. These records, however, leave untold the story of what was done to prepare this country for its predestined participation in the great conflict. In this movement, which contributed directly to the success of our armies in the field, Harvard took a leading and important part. It would be impossible in this short article to give any general description of the services so rendered, and this account is limited to a brief description of the so-called Plattsburg movement and of what was done by the University itself in Cambridge.

To Major General Leonard Wood, M.D. '84, LL.D. '99, and to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt '80 primarily belongs the credit of arousing this country to prepare for the World War and the nation owes them a debt of gratitude for their foresight.

During the years immediately preceding the war General Wood was stationed at Governor's Island in New York Harbor in command of the Department of the East. Even before the great war commenced in Europe in 1914, under his leadership the work of preparing the young men of the country for any possible emergency was begun, developing into the so-called Plattsburg movement.

Through the initiative of General Wood and of a number of farseeing university presidents the first Federal training camps for college students were held in 1913 at Gettysburg and elsewhere and these camps were continued in 1914 and 1915. They were increasingly attended by students of Harvard and of other colleges.

The real Plattsburg movement, however, commenced in 1915, again under General Wood's leadership, and in this movement many Harvard men played a part.

During the winter of 1915 at the annual dinner of the Harvard Club of New York City General Wood spoke on the need of preparedness and asked to have a smaller group interested in the subject gathered to discuss the matter more frankly and intimately. Accordingly, some fifty members of the Club met at dinner to talk the situation over with General Wood, and the seed of preparedness was sown in fertile soil. The plan of training camps for men older than students was not yet, however, evolved.

After the sinking of the Lusitania in May, 1915, a group of men in New York, most of whom were Harvard graduates, gathered to discuss what they could do. This group appointed a sub-committee of three Harvard men who proposed as a plan of action the holding of a training camp for business and professional men along the lines of the student camps. The committee consulted General Wood and placed this proposal before him. He told them that if they could enlist one hundred men he would arrange a camp at Plattsburg after the student's camp to be held that July. This group then started at once to enlist the necessary numbers. They formed committees of various college clubs and groups of business men throughout the country and on June 14, 1915, a large recruiting meeting was held in the Harvard Club of New York City. This meeting was addressed with great earnestness by General Wood and started the active recruiting. The movement developed so swiftly that in August, 1915, over twelve hundred men, many of them over military age, gathered at Plattsburg for four weeks of intensive training, from August 10th to September 6th, under the best officers of the regular army whom General Wood could assemble. All of these "rookies" paid their own expenses, including transportation, uniforms and subsistence, and the Government furnished tents, rifles, ammunition, and the instructors. The personnel of those who attended was exceedingly high, including many distinguished men. Of those present one-third were Harvard men.

After this first business and professional men's camp at Plattsburg an overflow camp of some six hundred men was held in September to October, 1915, for men who had not applied in time to attend the first camp. The movement also spread westward and in the late summer and fall of 1915 similar camps were held at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, and The Presidio, California, and many Harvard men of the West attended these camps.

In the autumn of 1915 various organizations formed by those who had attended the different camps, including the students' camps, were merged into the Military Training Camps Association of the United States, of which most of the active executive officers were Harvard graduates.

During the winter of 1915-16, the Plattsburg idea was developed by monthly meetings of members of the Training Camps Association held in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and elsewhere. These meetings were presided over and addressed by officers of the United States Army, who spoke on military subjects. The meetings in New York and Boston were held at the Harvard Clubs of those cities.

During this winter (1915-16) the Association took up the work of organizing and recruiting for the camps of 1916. Legislation by Congress was secured whereby the "Plattsburg" camps were recognized, and the War Department became aroused to the desirability of the movement and agreed to furnish uniforms and subsistence for the 1916 camps. In that summer some 16,000 men underwent intensive training at twelve camps of four weeks each held at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia (two camps); Plattsburg, New York (five camps); Fort Terry, Plum Island, New York (for boys); Monterey, California; Salt Lake City, Utah; American Lake, Washington; and San Antonio, Texas.

The Plum Island Camp, organized through the initiative of the Military Training Camps Association, was for young boys from fifteen to eighteen years of age, of whom about twelve hundred attended. Many of the assistant instructors at this camp were Harvard men who had attended the Plattsburg camp of 1915. This boy's camp was so successful that about twenty thousand boys had applied to attend similar camps planned for 1917 before this country entered the war.

In the summer of 1916, also, a "Naval Plattsburg" training cruise was established on battleships of our Navy under the direction of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Franklin D. Roosevelt '04.

During the winter of 1916-17, the Military Training Camps Association continued to prepare for camps to be held in the summer of 1917. However, with the declaration by our Government of the existence of a state of war with Germany on April 6, 1917, the need for these preliminary camps ceased and the need of training officers for the Army became acute. The Government promptly adopted in toto the Plattsburg plan for its Officers' Training Camps, which commenced in May, 1917, at many different posts throughout the country. About ninety per cent of the line officers of the Army were trained at these and succeeding camps. It is safe to say that without the experience of the pre-war camps the Government would have been at a loss for an efficient method of training its line officers and the Army might have been in large part trained and led, as in past wars, by volunteer officers quite untrained for their responsibilities. Thus, through the Plattsburg idea our Army was efficiently officered and thousands of lives doubtless saved. For these results General Wood and the many Harvard men who had been constantly in the lead of the movement are largely responsible.

All of those who had been trained at the pre-war camps and who were not physically incapacitated or prevented by unavoidable obligations at once qualified for service and formed a reliable nucleus for the officers of the Army.

During the war the Military Training Camps Association under the leadership of older men unable to serve in the Army, many of them Harvard graduates, maintained the closest liaison with the War Department, coöperating in its work, such as recruiting and passing on the qualifications of applicants for Officers' Training Camps, helping to establish a sound policy for continuous officers camps in 1918, recruiting for all branches of the service, and in many other ways.

Many of the largest patriotic and recruiting meetings were held in the Harvard Clubs — such as the great Allied meeting in the Harvard Club of New York City on April 9, 1917; the meeting at the same place on April 20, 1917, at which the French officers en route to Harvard were greeted on the day they landed; and the enormous meeting of men of all colleges also held in that Club on May 4, 1917, to recruit for the first officers camps, at which Colonel Theodore Roosevelt '80, Joseph Hodges Choate '52 (just prior to his death), and Henry L. Stimson, l'91, were the speakers.

This last meeting was held under the auspices of the College Men's Training Corps, an organization formed by the different college clubs in New York City in March, 1917, to prepare for service in the impending conflict. Its honorary and executive heads were both Harvard men and the organization continued in active preparedness for the war, with drills and lectures by Army officers, until just prior to the second series of Officers' Training Camps.

Since the war the Military Training Camps Association has continued, largely under Harvard guidance, its activities in the effort to achieve the aim expressed on its organization — universal national training and service — and in 1921 it is actively engaged in coöperating with the War Department in the development of a system of citizens' military training camps to be held this year for the first time to train the younger men of the nation in perpetuation of the Plattsburg idea. All four of the national officers of the Association and many of its local officers and members of its important committees, are Harvard men.

Thus, Harvard men played a leading part in preparing for the great war and are still engaged in preparing for the future, seeking to establish a system of training which will enable our country in the event of future hostilities to take its part promptly and efficiently and which in time of peace will promote unity and Americanism.

Many of the then undergraduates at Harvard had attended the student's and the first Plattsburg camps in 1913 to 1915, and these and other undergraduates were eager to prepare themselves for service in the event of war. Consequently, with the full approval and active coöperation of President Lowell and of the faculty, on January 10, 1916, a Harvard regiment was organized under the command of Captain Constant Cordier, U. S. A., who was then on recruiting duty in Boston and who volunteered his services and was appointed Commandant and Instructor by the President of the University. This regiment was Harvard's first step toward preparedness for war. The United States Government furnished the rifles, bayonets and belts for the regiment, but nothing more in the way of equipment, and the regiment had, in a strict sense, no official standing. The total enrollment in this regiment amounted to about one thousand men and a high state of efficiency was achieved.

For the academic year 1916-17, pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress of June 3, 1916, authorizing the establishment in educational institutions of units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, Harvard established such a corps under the command of Captain Cordier, who was appointed Professor of Military Science and Tactics, and a course of instruction and of drill was laid out to meet the requirements of the War Department. Later in the year the War Department detailed for this work two additional officers, Captain William S. Bowen and Captain James A. Shannon, and six non-commissioned officers. It was Captain Shannon who as Colonel was killed in action in October, 1918, and after whom the American Legion Post at Harvard is named.

On February 3, 1917, the very day upon which the German Ambassador was given his passports, President Lowell with admirable foresight wrote to the French Ambassador to the United States asking him whether it would be possible to obtain some French officers to assist in the instruction of the Corps. On the advice of the Ambassador, the French Government detailed for this duty six officers, chosen from among the best in the service, all of whom had been wounded in action. These officers landed in this country on April 20, 1917, and immediately reported in Cambridge to train the Harvard Corps in the tactics so successfully in force in the French Army. The Chief of the French Mission was Commandant (later Lieutenant Colonel) Paul Azan, and the others were Commandant Jean de Reviers de Mauny, Capitaines Adolphe Dupont and Marcel de Jarny, and Lieutenants André Morize and Jean Giraudoux. These were the first French officers to come to this country to give military instruction and their coming was an event of the greatest significance not only to the University but to the country at large. For their expert knowledge of the most modern arts of war, for their enthusiasm, loyalty, intelligence, and affectionate devotion, Harvard University and the American people will always owe a debt of gratitude — to the officers themselves and to the nation which so generously loaned them to us.

The example set by Harvard in obtaining these French officers was later followed by the Government and many French and British officers were subsequently loaned to the country to help train its inexperienced armies.

Soon after this country entered the war the University went on a war footing. Many members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who were of age left to attend the Officers' Training Camps, while many others joined the Naval Reserve, the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, and other branches of the Army and Navy. The remaining members of the Harvard R. O. T. C. quickly finished their strictly academic work, the University holding final examinations for them in April and May, and entered upon a course of intensive military training which lasted from May 8, 1917 to August 15, 1917. During this period there were admitted not only students in the University but also students of other colleges and graduates of Harvard and other universities, including one hundred members of the Yale R.O.T.C. There were 1,885 on the roster from February to August. The Freshman Halls were used as barracks and the training included a three weeks' encampment at Barre, Massachusetts. This training was conducted by members of the French Mission and by Captains Cordier, Bowen, and Shannon, and also for a short time by Captain Winfield S. Overton, who had been stationed at Yale. To these intelligent and efficient officers of the Army the University owes a debt of gratitude.

During the summer of 1917, many members of this Corps who had become of age were admitted to the second series of Officers' Training Camps, while seven members, too young to go to the training camps, at the invitation of General Wood gave instruction to Army officers at Camp Funston, Kansas, on the methods of trench warfare learned from the French Mission.

The instruction by the French Mission had been so successful and had become so well known that after the close of the first series of Government camps 550 newly commissioned reserve officers, holding ranks from lieutenant to major, were detailed by the Government to receive additional instruction in modern warfare at Harvard. These men were quartered in the Freshman Halls and became known as the "Iron Battalion," out of compliment to Colonel Azan whose command in France had borne that name.

Before the opening of the academic year in September, 1917, the officers detailed by our Government had been withdrawn and most of the French officers had left the University for broader fields of usefulness to the nation. The University was, however, so fortunate as to retain the services of Lieutenant Morize (who since April, 1917, has been continuously connected with the University and is now one of its faculty) and to have Colonel Azan, who had been appointed to command all the French officers giving instruction in the training camps in the northern part of the United States, stationed near enough to Cambridge to supervise the work of the R.O.T.C. Our Government also detailed Major William F. Flynn, U.S.A., retired, to command the Harvard R.O.T.C., and he was appointed by the University Professor of Military Science and Tactics.

During the academic year 1917-18, the University offered two courses in Military Science and Tactics and the R.O.T.C. was reorganized into a regiment of twelve companies, with a total membership of 1,193. From time to time the members who became of age left to enter active service, so that the numbers were continually fluctuating. The R.O.T.C., however, continued until the end of the college year and then had six weeks of intensive training in the summer in Cambridge and in Lancaster, Massachusetts. There were 522 men enrolled in this summer camp.

Time has confirmed the conclusion that the work done by Harvard during this period was enormously valuable and completely successful. It enabled Harvard to make a contribution to our military strength second to that of no other college.

In the academic year of 1917-18, three distinct naval schools were also conducted at Harvard:

1. The Naval course given by the University for members of the Naval Reserve, first under Lieutenant Edward Forbes Greene, U.S.N., Retired, whose death on December 18, 1917, was a serious loss, and later, under Ensign William L. Barnard '99, N.N.V., and Lieutenant Commander Joseph C. Nowell, U.S.N.N.V.

2. The Government School for Ensigns, known as the "Officer Material School," under command of Captain James P. Parker '96, N.N.V.; and

3. United States Naval Radio School under Lieutenant Commander Nathaniel F. Ayer '00, U.S.N.R.F.

All of these schools were continued until after the armistice, excepting that the naval course given by the University was succeeded by the Naval Unit of the Students' Army Training Corps. The two Government schools grew rapidly in numbers, especially the United States Naval Radio School, which, in the autumn of 1918, had nearly five thousand members, most of whom were quartered and instructed in Harvard buildings. This school continued until April, 1919.

On October 1, 1918, branches of the Students' Army Training Corps were organized at Harvard and at 515 other colleges of the country, with a total strength of 145,012 men. This Corps was organized by the Government in the colleges throughout the country in an effort to mobilize as a distinct training branch of the Army the entire able bodied personnel over eighteen years of age in all of the collegiate institutions of the country. The Corps was wholly demobilized under orders of the War Department in December, 1918, and was in active existence therefore for only about two months and for only a little over one month before the armistice on November 11, 1918.

At Harvard the whole program and life of the University were rearranged to conform to the requirements of the War Department. The normal courses were kept running on a modified schedule for the members of the S.A.T.C., and for the few other students who were incapacitated or otherwise exempt from military service, but Harvard to all intents and purposes became a Government military school. The University assigned to the S.A.T.C. many of its important buildings, including all of the Freshman Dormitories. The Army Branch of the S.A.T.C. contained on November 1, 1918, 701 college students and 565 from the high schools, while the Naval Unit had 441 men. There was also a small junior S.A.T.C. to take care of college students under eighteen. The S.A.T.C. was under the command of Major Radcliffe Heermance, a Princeton professor.

xvi HARVARD'S PART IN PREPARING FOR WORLD WAR

Since the armistice, Harvard has reëstablished its Reserve Officers' Training Corps in the form of a unit of Field Artillery under the command of Major Robert C. F. Goetz, U.S.A., and this, it is expected, will continue as a permanent training unit.

ROLL OF SERVICE

PART I

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In the Roll of Service the names of the men on the Roll of Honor are printed in capitals and starred.

In accordance with instructions from the War Records Advisory Committee, the roll of service is limited to the records of men whose connection with the University preceded their war service.

The record of service is given chronologically, followed by the engagements taken part in and distinctions won. If a man died after leaving service, but not from disability clearly incurred in service, the date and place of his death are given.

The Croix de Guerre awarded with a citation to the order of the Army carries with it the Palm; to the order of the Army Corps, the Gold Star; to the order of the Division, the Silver Star. For greater clearness, therefore, at the end of each citation for the Croix de Guerre the grade is stated in parentheses rather than the fact that the Palm or Star was also awarded.

It should be understood that "discharged" is used as the equivalent for "honorably discharged."

A degree is followed by the year in which it was conferred. In the case of out-of-course degrees the date of the degree is followed by the date in parentheses when it was actually conferred. Thus, A.B. '96 (95) means that the degree was received in 1895 as of 1896.

When a student did not receive a degree, the years of his enrollment are given with the department in which he was enrolled. If his course of study were not completed when this volume went to press, the first year of his enrollment only is given, followed by a dash. Thus, m'18- . If a man was admitted to college but never registered on account of going at once into service, his name is followed by ***.

The following abbreviations are used to indicate the departments of the University:

a Architecture	ged Graduate School of Education
b Bussey Institution	l Law School
c College	la School of Landscape Architecture
dn Dental School	m Medical School

Awarded Distinguished Service Cross:

"For extraordinary heroism in action near Vourbin, France, 15 July, 1918. Lieutenant Thomas J. Abernethy, while on patrol duty attacked an enemy plane at close range, firing 100 rounds at a distance of from 50 to 200 yards. He followed the German ship down and saw it fall out of control, and as he turned he found five enemy planes diving at him. Without hesitation he took the offensive and fired 200 rounds into the enemy ships at not more than 15 to 20 yards. He observed tracer bullets entering the bodies of the enemy aircraft, but owing to the violence of the combat he did not have time to observe whether any of his foes were shot down. Fighting vigorously, he succeeded in dispersing the enemy ships, and making a safe landing within his own lines, although his own engine and plane were almost shot to pieces."

Awarded Croix de Guerre with the following citation:

"Pilote de grand courage dont la conduite, en toutes circonstances, a été un exemple pour tous. Le 15 juillet 1918, a poursuivi seul un Fokker à 25 kilomètres dans les lignes ennemies jusqu'au moment où il le vit désespéré à 50 mètres du sol. Rentrant dans ses lignes, a été attaqué par cinq ennemis et, après un dur combat, a été atterri dans les tranchées de première ligne. Le 24 juillet, a abattu deux avions ennemis" (general order of the Army).

"At Clair-Chêne Woods, on October 20, 1918, Captain Adams led his Company with most conspicuous bravery in the attack. With the utmost coolness he took his Company across an open field swept by machine gun and rifle fire, led them into the woods, capturing prisoners and cleaning out machine gun nests. Upon reaching the front of the woods he found that his Company was in danger of being cut off, whereupon he led them back through the woods in a line of skirmishers, capturing more prisoners. His Company was led back disorganized under heavy machine gun and rifle fire. Later he led his Company again across the open to the woods, which had been reoccupied by the enemy. Throughout the following six days he remained in the woods, while it was held against counter-attack, and consolidated his position. His coolness and extraordinary bravery throughout the action was largely responsible for the capture and holding of the woods."

Officially credited with the destruction of two enemy airplanes and one balloon. Awarded Distinguished Service Cross:

"For extraordinary heroism in action north of Château-Thierry, France, July 25, 1918. While on his first patrol over the enemy's lines, Lieutenant Avery attacked an enemy two-seater biplane. While thus occupied he was vigorously attacked by another enemy plane, but by a quick turn, skillful maneuvering and accurate shooting, he drove the second plane to the American side of the lines, where it crashed into the woods. Lieutenant Avery's motor had been badly damaged by bullets, but he made a successful landing back of our lines, where he learned that the enemy pilot who had been made prisoner was a German ace credited with sixteen victories. Lieutenant Avery's conduct was especially commendable because his plane had been seriously damaged at the beginning of the combat."

Awarded Croix de Guerre with the following citations:

"Pilote adroit et énergique, a effectué de nombreuses patrouilles au front, et au cours de l'une d'elles, malgré le feu violent de l'infanterie et de l'artillerie ennemies, a mitraillé, à plusieurs reprises, les tranchées allemandes situées face au secteur d'une division américaine" (general order of the Division).

"Jeune pilote qui, à sa première patrouille sur les lignes le 25 juillet 1918, a abattu un 'as' pilote allemand comptant plus de seize victoires. Pendant tout le combat a montré le courage le plus exceptionnel, le sang-froid, l'habileté les plus remarquables. A été lui-même forcé d'atterrir avec un appareil gravement endommagé" (general order of the Army).

Awarded Ordre de Léopold (Belgian) with the following citation:

"For extraordinary heroism in action on 12 April 1918 near Corbeny, France, and on 15 May 1918, near Ypres, Belgium. Captain Biddle has daily shown himself an excellent and remarkable example of courage, energy and skill, leading his pilots to the attack at every opportunity and making his flight a most efficient one. On 12 April, he attacked and destroyed an enemy two-seater which crashed between the trenches at Corbeny. On 15 May, while leading his patrol, he attacked, at very low altitude and far within the enemy lines, an enemy two-seater, killing the observer and forcing him down. A few minutes later he engaged a second enemy plane at very close range. Wounded in his leg, his plane and motor riddled, Captain Biddle was forced to land in 'No Man's Land' less than 70 yards from the German trenches in the region of Ypres. With remarkable courage and presence of mind and despite his wound, he detached himself from his smashed machine and made his way from shell hole to shell hole under intense artillery, machine gun and rifle fire, to an advanced British Observation post."

Engagements: Aisne defensive, Château-Thierry. Awarded Ordre de la Couronne (Belgian). Awarded Distinguished Service Cross:

"For extraordinary heroism in action east of Château-Thierry, France, June 17, 1918. Despite the coldness of the water, the swiftness of the current, and the presence of the enemy on the opposite bank, Lieutenant Busk completed a personal reconnaissance of the enemy's position by swimming the River Marne, after which he took a patrol across the river in boats, and obtained valuable information regarding the movements of the enemy."

Cited in general orders Headquarters 3d Division, A.E.F.:

"On the night of June 16-17, 1918, this officer was designated to cross the Marne River with a patrol for the purpose of capturing and bringing back a prisoner, by surprising any of the enemy who were moving. He had not accomplished the mission after having waited until almost daylight, when he boldly entered a wood supposed to be occupied by the enemy, where he encountered a hostile detachment which fired on his patrol and severely wounded him."

Awarded Distinguished Service Cross:

"For extraordinary heroism in action on May 19, 1918. He attacked an enemy biplane at an altitude of 4,500 meters, east of Flirey, France. He rushed to the attack, but after shooting a few rounds his gun jammed. Undeterred by this accident he maneuvered so as to protect himself, corrected the jam in mid air, and returned to the assault. After a short, violent action, the enemy plane took fire and crashed to the earth.

"One bronze oak leaf is awarded Lieutenant Campbell for each of the following acts of extraordinary heroism in action. On May 27, 1918, he encountered three monoplanes at an altitude of 3,000 meters over Montsec, France. Despite the superior strength of the enemy, he promptly attacked, and fighting a brilliant battle, shot down one German machine, which fell in three pieces, and drove the other two well within the enemy lines. On May 28, 1918, he saw six German Albatros aeroplanes flying toward him at an altitude of 2,000 meters, near Bois Rata, France. Regardless of personal danger, he immediately attacked, and by skillful maneuvering and accurate operation of his machine gun he brought one plane down in flames and drove the other five back into their own lines. On May 31, 1918, he took the offensive against two German planes at an altitude of 2,500 meters over Livronville, France, shot down one of them, and pursued the other far behind the German lines. On June 5, 1918, accompanied by another pilot, he attacked two enemy battle planes at an altitude of 5,700 meters over Eply, France. After a spirited combat he was shot through the back by a machine-gun bullet, but in spite of his injury he kept on fighting until he had forced one of the enemy planes to the ground, where it was destroyed by artillery fire, and had driven the other plane back into its own territory."

Awarded Croix de Guerre with the following citation:

"Remarquable pilote de chasse. Le 14 avril 1918 a abattu un avion ennemi dans nos lignes après un combat aussi rapide que brillant" (general order of the Army).

"4^e Brigade américaine sous les ordres du général de brigade James G. Harbord, comprenant: le 5^e régiment de marine, sous les ordres du colonel Wendell C. Neville, le 6^e régiment de marine, sous les ordres du colonel Albertus W. Catlin, le 6^e bataillon de mitrailleuses, sous les ordres du commandant Edward B. Cole: A été jetée en pleine bataille, sur un front violemment attaqué par l'ennemi. S'est affirmée aussitôt comme une unité de tout premier ordre. Dès son entrée en ligne, a brisé, en liaison avec les troupes françaises, une violente attaque ennemie sur un point important de la position et entrepris ensuite à son compte une série d'opérations offensives. Au cours de ces opérations, grâce au courage brillant, à la rigueur, à l'allant, à la ténacité de ses hommes qui ne se sont laissés rebuter ni par les fatigues ni par les pertes; grâce à l'activité et à l'énergie de ses officiers; grâce enfin à l'action personnelle de son chef, le général J. Harbord, la 4^e brigade a vu ses efforts couronnés de succès. En intime liaison l'un avec l'autre, ses deux régiments et son bataillon de mitrailleuses ont réalisé, après douze jours de lutte incessante (du 2 au 13 juin 1918) dans un terrain très difficile, une progression variant entre 1500 et 2000 mètres, sur un front de 4 kilomètres, capturant un nombreux matériel, faisant plus de 500 prisonniers, infligeant à l'ennemi des pertes considérables et lui enlevant deux points d'appui de première importance: le village de Boureauches, et le bois organisé de Belleau" (general order of the Army).

"For distinguished and exceptional gallantry at Châtel-Chéhéry, France, on October 8, 1918."

Cited in general orders Headquarters 82d Division, A.E.F.:

"On October 8, 1918, west of Châtel-Chéhéry, France, Captain E. C. B. Danforth, Jr., led his company in attack against a hill covered with machine gun nests, his company being under fire from three sides. After losing many men as casualties, he reorganized his company and by his coolness and disregard of personal safety, inspired his men to a successful advance to the Corps objective, a railroad that supplied the enemy with food and ammunition in the heart of the Argonne Forest. In the advance of his company, together with the members of the adjacent company, were captured 270 prisoners, 123 machine guns, a battery of 77 calibre field guns, a trench mortar, besides much material of less consequence. The Commanding General takes particular pride in announcing to the command these fine examples of courage and self-sacrifice. Such deeds are evidence of that spirit of heroism which is innate in the highest type of American soldier and responds unflinchingly to the call of duty whenever and wherever it may come."

Cited in general orders 164th Infantry Brigade, A.E.F.:

"This officer displayed marked leadership in all the operations of this regiment. His bravery, self-sacrifice and devotion to duty was an inspiration to his men."

"For exceptionally meritorious and conspicuous services. As Sanitary Inspector of the 2d Division and in charge of the front line hospitalization and evacuation of the wounded during the active operations of the Division in the Marne area, and later as Division Surgeon during the Meuse-Argonne offensive, he demonstrated his professional attainments, excellent judgment and gallantry in the execution of his important duties. Due to his energy, the sanitary units under his control were amply provided with facilities for the proper care of the sick and wounded in the field. He has given services of significant worth to the American Expeditionary Forces."

Cited in general orders Headquarters 2d Division, A.E.F.:

"This officer served as Assistant Division Surgeon in the action northwest of Château-Thierry, and as Division Surgeon during the rest of the operations of the 2d Division. His services were distinguished, exceptionally meritorious, and in duty of great responsibility. The successful and efficient handling of the numerous patients was due in a large measure to his untiring efforts and efficient supervision."

Cited in general orders Headquarters 2d Division, A.E.F.:

"In the action against the enemy near Thiaucourt, France, on September 12-15, 1918, voluntarily went to the front line when Surgeon Boone was engaged and assisted materially in the location of the dressing stations and moved his ambulances to those stations through continuous bombardment by artillery and fire of machine guns and helped personally toward the evacuation of the wounded. This action on his part was purely voluntary and while on his way to the front and during the time he remained there and on his return, he constantly risked his life under heavy fire."

Awarded Croix de Guerre with the following citation:

"Du 2 au 10 octobre 1918 près de Blanc-Mont, a fait preuve d'une énergie inlassable en assurant l'évacuation rapide des blessés. Sans souci du violent feu d'artillerie et de mitrailleuses, a visité les postes de secours avancés, donnant ainsi à tous un superbe exemple de sang-froid et de dévouement" (general order of the Army Corps).

"Section dirigée par le chef américain Drake, Thayer, nouvellement affectée à la 66^{ème} Division. Elle a eu l'occasion de fonctionner pour la première fois à la division pendant l'attaque du 30 juillet 1917 et les contre-attaques des jours suivants. S'est fait remarquer immédiatement en évacuant les blessés avec le maximum de rapidité, sur des routes soumises à de violents bombardements, donnant ainsi la preuve de qualités exceptionnelles de courage et de sang-froid. S'était déjà fait remarquer à Verdun et pendant la bataille de l'Aisne" (general order of the Division).

"Sous la direction et la conduite exemplaire de son chef, le lieutenant Drake, Ervin, la Section 646 a montré un entrain remarquable et un dévouement sans bornes qui ont fait l'admiration des divisions voisines pendant les opérations du 26 septembre au 1^{er} octobre 1918. Malgré des difficultés matérielles considérables, et avec un mépris absolu du danger, a réussi, grâce au zèle inlassable de tous ses conducteurs, à évacuer, avec une régularité parfaite, de nuit et de jour, sans aucun répit, non seulement tous les blessés de la division, mais encore a trouvé le moyen de désencombrer les unités voisines" (general order of the Army).

"Engagé volontaire à l'âge de 53 ans, a fait preuve des plus hautes qualités morales, s'est toujours dévoué sans compter pour donner l'exemple à tous, notamment dans la soirée du 12 février 1918, où il s'est porté au poste de secours avancé pour dégager une voiture sanitaire enlissée contenant des blessés exposés au feu de l'ennemi" (general order of the Division).

"Ancien volontaire, ayant déjà fait ses preuves sur le front français. Envoyé à l'improviste pour remplacer dans son commandement un camarade absent, a fait preuve de courage en faisant une reconnaissance sous le feu de l'ennemi. Pendant les journées du 8 et du 9 août 1918, a rendu les plus grands services. Toujours au poste le plus avancé, veillant à tous les détails, a par son énergique exemple obtenu le rendement le meilleur d'un personnel qu'il ne connaissait pas. Déjà cité à l'ordre de la Division." (general order of the Division).

"Au front, comme volontaire, depuis juin 1917 bien qu'ayant dépassé l'âge de servir (53 ans). Au cours des derniers combats auxquels a pris part la Division, a dirigé sa section de façon remarquable. Sur pied de jour et de nuit, reconnaissant les routes sans souci du danger, de façon à pousser ses voi-
